NEW WICKERSON EGGNICKS DEATH CLEW OUT 80,000 MEN

A new and important clue was given to the investigation of the mysterious murder of Mrs. Lillian C. Wickerson of Jamaica Plain on a day line steamer, on her way from Providence to New York, when the federal authorities of Rhode Island today took up the case.

Charles A. Wilson, United States district attorney for the Rhode Island district, took the matter to hand today, because the crime was committed, the evidence goes to show, on the high seas, and the inquiry into it would come properly within the federal domain.

Mrs. Wickerson met her death on the high seas. The first act of Mr. Wilson was to assign detectives to ascertain whether or not she had been murdered, and if so, to determine whether Mrs. Wickerson was her death on the high seas.

DRILL FOUND IN POMEROY CELL

A crude and unimpressive, indeed, the jail authorities in the well known for a drill, was found in the cell occupied by James Pomroy, a life prisoner at the Charleston State Prison, following a search made by the prison officials. The authorities were not inclined to believe Pomroy had drilled with outsiders to escape his liberty, but thought the prisoner must have devised the instrument himself.

DRILL FOUND IN POMEROY CELL

The fact that the point was sharpened on the left side of the instrument, which was found in the cell, was a discovery. The instrument was found in the cell of James Pomroy, a life prisoner at the Charleston State Prison.

K. OF C. OPEN CONVENTION

What's the matter with Senator Lodge?
The Senator isn't saying, but Nahant is nighly anxious to hear the answer, since it was noised about the town today that Henry Cabot isn't going to preside over the next town meeting, legend, and didn't mind telling the people so, though he won't tell the reason.

The news, coming in a letter from the Senator at Washington, gave Nahant an awful shock. The old town now sits tight.
